

Message

From: Shoren Brown, Trout Unlimited [sbrown@tu.org]
Sent: 6/14/2013 6:04:35 PM
To: DePass, Michelle [/o=ExchangeLabs/ou=Exchange Administrative Group (FYDIBOHF23SPDLT)/cn=Recipients/cn=dced5c406f0b4c7499f88e6d25d17c67-MDePass]
Subject: Bristol Bay in the News, June 11, 2013

If you're having trouble viewing this email, you may see it online.

Bristol Bay in the News, June 14, 2013

The Seattle Times published a strong editorial that Bristol Bay should be protected from the epic scale of the proposed Pebble Mine, which creates deep concerns about impacts on rivers, streams and wetlands.

The editorial board writes: "Plans for a massive copper and gold mine at the headwaters of Bristol Bay represent a long-term hazard to the health of an extraordinary source of wild salmon." Emphasizing the natural resources and commercial bounty of the fishery, the opinion concludes: "Protect a valuable resource from an avoidable and artificial hazard."

Sen. Lisa Murkowski had strong words for the Pebble Partnership in Alaska recently and said the mine backers aren't helping themselves by not disclosing a plan. "As a policymaker who spends most of my days saying there is a process we need to follow, I have a tough time telling the state to chop it off at the knees. But I'll tell you one thing: Pebble isn't doing itself any favors by not giving more definition to its plans. They have documents to the moon, but no images or mine plans. The best thing Pebble could do is lay it on the table so we have something real to deal with."

In the Beltway, Politico covered the battle over Pebble Mine behind the scenes, chronicling some of the opposition to the mine, reporting on the EPA process and big spending on lobbying by the Pebble backers.

For more information, visit savebristolbay.org

Shoren Brown

Bristol Bay Campaign Director

Tim Bristol

Trout Unlimited Alaska Director

Protect Alaska's Bristol Bay

Editorial

The Seattle Times

PLANS for a massive copper and gold mine at the headwaters of Bristol Bay represent a long-term hazard to the health of an extraordinary source of wild salmon ... Click here to read more

Over a Kodiak beer, Murkowski discusses Frankenfish

Laine Welch

Anchorage Daily News

Salmon setnet families streamed out of Kodiak all week, headed to their sites to get ready for the June 9 season opener. Their departures wrapped up a busy week of Memorial Day festivities on "the rock," including festivals, fleet blessings, a landslide on Cannery Row and visits by both of Alaska's U.S. senators ... Click here to read more

Bay is sustainable, creates jobs; Mine would hurt fishing industry

Letters to the Editor

The Seattle Times

David Harsila, President, Alaska Independent Fishermen's Marketing Association

Travis Campbell, CEO, Far Bank Enterprises

I appreciate that The Seattle Times recognizes the incredible economic contributions and jobs of the Bristol Bay salmon fishery and how much that means to Washington state ["Editorial: Protect Bristol Bay," Opinion, June 2]. The Times calls it right when it says Bristol Bay's American jobs and sustainable natural environment deserve protection now ... Click here to read more

In Alaska, planned mine pits salmon against gold

Erica Martinson

Politico

An Alaska mining proposal that hasn't even gotten off the drawing board is inspiring a ferocious lobbying campaign on Capitol Hill ... Click here to read more

Huge proposed Alaska mine could be next big environmental controversy for Obama

Claire Thompson

Grist

While environmental groups have been pouring energy into opposing the Keystone XL pipeline, a less talked-about fight in Alaska is bubbling over into what The Washington Post says "may be one of the most important environmental decisions of President Obama's second term": whether to allow construction of a massive mine near Bristol Bay, one of the most productive salmon fisheries in the world (supplying half the world's sockeye salmon) and home to potentially vast reserves of gold and copper ... Click here to read more

Pebble Mine comment period extended

Bart French

Billings Gazette

The Environmental Protection Agency has extended the comment period for the controversial Pebble Mine in Alaska that would affect one of the nation's most productive sockeye salmon fisheries ... Click here to read more

Dispute over Pebble project draws scant attention in Lower 48

Juliet Eilperin

Anchorage Daily News

A dispute over a proposed copper and gold mine near Bristol Bay may be one of the most important environmental decisions of President Obama's second term -- yet few in the Lower 48 are even aware that the fight is happening ... Click here to read more

The Biggest Environmental Dispute no one wants to Talk About

Lawrence Karol

Take Part

The controversy over the Canada-to-Nebraska Keystone XL pipeline project has been in the news for a while now, most recently following an announcement that the Obama administration won't make a decision on its fate until later this year. Meanwhile, another important environmental dispute is occurring largely under the radar in southwestern Alaska ... Click here to read more

Trout Unlimited | 419 Sixth Street, Suite 200 | Juneau, AK 99801

This email was sent to depass.michelle@epa.gov. To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

manage your preferences | opt out using TrueRemove®.

Got this as a forward? Sign up to receive our future emails.
email marketing by Trout Unlimited